

ROOM WITH A VIEW

We are currently in the middle of renovating our property. The house lends itself to a rustic, relaxed style. I like to use second-hand items where possible as I love the personality they bring. This home office spot was accidental. It wasn't until we plastered the room that I really took notice of this little space and its expansive views. Luckily, I already had this desk and it fits perfectly under the window. Not many people say they can't wait to go to work, but I genuinely love my little office!

LOVELY & LOVED

I describe my home style as 'modern-country' with an emphasis on sustainability. The table and chairs are second-hand, the sketches are by my late Grandad and the cupboard doors under the stairs were left by the previous owners. Despite having seen better days, we decided to strip back the many layers of paint revealing this gorgeous wood, which matches the picture frames! I love the result and think it adds a bit of texture to our kitchen-diner.

TURNING TABLES

I'd call my home style 'DIY décor', as I try to decorate and upgrade my home myself. I love Scandinavian interior style as I'm very minimalistic in my approach. I use plenty of light-toned woods and lots of white for a pared-back aesthetic. This corner of my home is focused on the desk project, which I made myself using my own bamboo pole wrap design.

LET THE SUNSHINE IN

We live in an extended 1800s cottage. Previously, these two rooms were separated by a single door and the conservatory had a leaking roof, as well as being too cold or too hot to sit in for much of the year. An orangery was put in its place, with double-glazed solar-controlled glass. Overhead beams in the lounge were sanded back and bespoke cabinetry hides the mod cons, meaning the period features take centre stage. Both rooms can now be enjoyed all year round with beautiful views of the garden.
